TO WOMAN READERS

Latest American Fashions

BY CORA MOORE.

The matinee and petticoat negligees are now more popular than the long, one-piece ones, and there is a multitude of charmingly quaint little "coatee" designs that can be made up in lace, chiffon or silk to wear as a silk or lingerie petticoat. Sometimes the matinee is fashioned from lace, and the petticoat from crepe de chine or messaline, making a pretty contrast, though they are often made of the same material.

Shell pink crepe de chine is used in the dainty negligee of the sketch. The cut-away coat is buttonhole edged and hand embroidered, and has an easily gathered empire waist line finished with covered cording. The right front laps over the left across the bust, and the kimono sleeves, edged with embroidery, are rounded up shorter on the outside of the arm and puffed a trifle above a tab of white rabbit fur.

A band of white rabbit also finishes the rounded neck. In back the coat extends to the knees. A long petticoat of the pink crepe de chine, with or without a train, is worn with it. There are scant gathers at the waist, and the skirt is finished around the hem with a band of the white fur.

Fascinating little bandier bonnets to match usually accompany the negligees. This one, of the same crepe de chine, is rather close fitting, embroidered in front and finished across the back with a complementing which ends in a rosette over each ear.

If preferred, white marabou may be used on the coat in place of the rabbit with equal grace.

Household Hints.

Valuable lace should be wrapped in blue paper. White paper is often bleached with chloride of lime, which injuriously affects delicate fabric.

If the water in the laundry tub, the bathtub or basin does not run freely down the outlet, use a buttonhook to remove the lint and strings which may have collected.

Wash a white serge coat and skirt with lukewarm water and a pure, white soap if hot coffee has been spilled on it. The stains will disappear.

Toast that is put in glass jars with the lid screwed on tightly will keep fresh for hours.

LATEST MILLINERY DESIGNS SHOW MANY SMALL HATS

But It Is Asserted in Paris That French Women Will Never Surrender Picture Hat—The Newest Styles for Spring.

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE.

The hatman may ask what more is there to say about the small hat—for and against. The milliner may answer that there is a good deal.

Even to the public not vitally interested in the fight for supremacy between the two sizes must prove of interest, involving, as it did, the different milliners and all the milliners. No one, even those far up in the trade, knew which would win out, and so they bought both kinds, with a strong leaning toward the small shape.

It was constantly asserted in Paris that the Frenchwomen would never surrender the picture hat, which they considered their frame and setting. But the Frenchwoman did this very thing. How could she help it, with such milliners as Rebour, Talbot and Demay insisting upon it and offering daily such alluring shapes that she could not resist?

True, even now she wears them as alternatives to the hat with a large brim, which the American well-dressed woman has dropped; but few, very few, Americans know how to pose this "frame" or were willing to give the time to it that every large hat demands. The Frenchwoman, on the contrary, is an expert in hat posing. She took this part of her toilet seriously when the rest of the world went bareheaded or wore hats to avoid sunstroke or pneumonia.

The Englishwoman has always been addicted to large hats, but she never had the art of posing them. On her they never assumed airs of coquetry or added piquancy to the face. On the Frenchwoman they did both. No woman could dislike to consider them old-fashioned. And, strange to say, this is just how they look. Even when worn by the American who knows their full value they have not the air of smartness given by the small hat.

The Aeroplane Hat.

Nothing but the insolent cocksureness of the tiny shapes in millinery can account for their victory over the huge cartwheel that made six of one of the conquerors. It is claimed that small men are more arrogant and conceited than large ones; that no man under five feet eight inches has modesty or humility; and possibly this interesting theory of human nature may be applied to hats.

The most modest of the new shapes is the aeroplane. It is an attractive affair, oblong, narrow small in the crown and trimmed with wide silk or satin ribbon. Its name is earned by the long loops that go out at the back. There may be one or two, but they must be stiff and thickly made.

Plain tulle may be used or this new and desirable floral ribbon which is the kind that in other days delighted the schoolgirl's heart. This is passed around the crown and ends in its own rudeness. These are especially fetching in elephant gray, which is evidently to be a smart color for spring along with khaki and all the varied tones of tan. With the gray goes white or gray ribbon, with or without a floral design.

There is also a very good looking hat in dark bright blue, a color that is durable and acceptable rather than especially fashionable. The shape is the prevailing one and the novelty is in the use of a stiff, flat agrette placed around the crown on the brim slanting backward. As all the brims on these shapes are rolled well over toward the crown, there are no strange ones of this feather ornament hanging on the hair, which is always an untidy effect.

Mixed in with these stiff, harsh spirals are sheaves of wheat, both dyed the exact blue tone of the hat. This new kind of fantasy is quite fashionable just now; it is difficult to give it a name. "Aigrette" does not describe it, for one immediately pictures something soft and flowing. The spirals are short, and many of them are on one stem, which is laid lengthwise on the hat.

This method of carrying trimming around the hat wherever there is a brim is likely to succeed the method of placing a solitary upright ornament in front or at the side. The latter will hold good, however, on anything in turban shape.

IN THE KITCHEN AND PANTRY

Frangipane.

Beat four eggs until the whites and yolks are well mixed. Add one quart of milk (scant), and two-thirds cup of sugar, a little salt. Cook in a double boiler until quite thick. Now add two ounces of crushed macaroons, a little butter, the grated rind of a lemon, a glass of maraschino and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Return to the fire, beat with the egg beater till smooth and quite thick. Pour out in sherbet glasses and chill. Just before serving beat a tablespoonful of whipping cream on the top and sprinkle with chopped maraschino cherries.

Some of the recipes for foreign dishes which have found particular favor on American tables are given below.

Caviar Canapes, Russia.

Take the fresh caviar, or a small can of the salted variety, season with lemon juice and a little minced shallot. Spread rounds of bread with caviar, then the chopped whites of hard-boiled eggs, or the yolks which have been put through the vegetable ricer. Now take small, red tomatoes of uniform size, skin and cut off the tops. Remove the pulp, fill the cavity with the prepared caviar, decorate the top with stiff mayonnaise dressing. Place a tomato on each round of bread and serve on a bed of lettuce.

Rice en Casserole, Spain.

Fry until brown, one tablespoonful of butter, one minced onion, ten drops of tabasco sauce, one-half cup of minced olives and a heating tablespoonful of chopped green pepper. Add one cupful of rice and cook till yellow. Put in a casserole dish; add two cupfuls of strained tomato and four cupfuls of good, rich broth. Cover closely and cook until the rice is tender. A few drops of Okra, sliced, are a nice addition to this.

Broccaded crepe de chine is one of the novelties we shall see used the coming season.

Sweet Milk for Ink Spots.

This is such a simple remedy for removing ink stains that it should be remembered. It is best when applied to wet ink spots. A big splash of ink can be removed from a carpet or from a wooden goods by washing it instantly in skim milk. Apply a cupful at a time of the cream be large. As fast as the milk is darkened by the squeezing of the sponge with which it is applied throw it away and substitute a fresh supply. When no more ink can be rubbed up rub the spot with clear water, thoroughly, and coat with a paste of cornstarch. Brush on the cornstarch two or three days later.

If ink has dried let the goods stand over night in the milk, which neutralizes the acid of the ink. Then rinse and, if necessary, scrub with soap and water.

To Clean Felt Hats.

Tan or gray felt hats may be made almost new by rubbing them with fuller's earth. First brush thoroughly to free from dirt. Then lay on a table and brush into every part of the hat with a clean complexion brush or fine nail brush. Shake the hat, then apply the fuller's earth again. Put in a dark place, cover well up, and leave for several days.

A white felt hat may be cleaned with equal parts of pipe clay and oatmeal of the tops. Rub the powder on every part of the hat. Then brush thoroughly.

Light-colored felt hats which are slightly soiled may be cleaned with dry cornmeal rubbed on with a piece of clean flannel.

A tan or gray coat or jacket may be cleaned the same way as a tan or gray felt hat.

Care of the Hands.

To keep the hands looking well, one should pass them through a good nourishing cream once or twice a week at bedtime and wear a pair of loose gloves. An equal portion of oatmeal, curdled and bran will be found excellent to use when you wash your hands, and you will not require so much soap. If you moisten this mixture with sour milk or buttermilk, the result will be even more pleasant.

POSTUM

These doctors represent but a fraction of the thousands of physicians who use Postum in place of coffee in their homes and in their practice.

Cases of shaky nerves, irritable hearts, indigestion, biliousness, headache and sleeplessness, due to coffee drinking, are observed in the everyday experience of medical men everywhere.

Following the change from coffee to Postum, the ailing one quickly discovers that the Doctor's advice to "quit coffee and use Postum" was sound.

Housework Superstitions.

You should always mark a cross on the top of a cake or a pan of bread before you set it to rise. This will prevent the devil from jumping on it and crushing it down flat.

Never turn a bed Friday, or the person who sleeps in it will have bad nights for a week.

Breakages always go in threes. So, if you have broken one thing, you should immediately smash two more worthless ones—empty bottles, or something of that kind—so that the breaking may be over and done with.

Never put a pair of shoes on a table, for this leads to a quarrel.

If two people wash their hands in the same water they should spit in it and cross it. Otherwise they will quarrel very shortly.
